Angels Executives

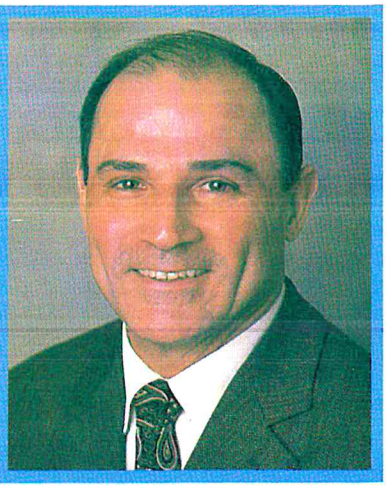

Tony Tavares • President, Anaheim Sports, Inc.

Tony Tavares was named as the first-ever president of Anaheim Sports, Inc. on March 1, 1993. He is responsible for the overall operation of both the Anaheim Angels and the NHL's Mighty Ducks of Anaheim.

In addition to bringing over 20 years of experience as a facilities management professional to Anaheim Sports, Inc., Tavares possesses strong leadership skills. His management style is highlighted by a keen attention to detail as Tavares closely monitors every aspect of the Angels operation, from player personnel moves to game operations.

Born in Fall River, Mass., Tavares grew up in Bristol, R.I., and holds a bachelor of science degree in accounting from Roger Williams College. He and his wife, Elizabeth, have three children, Sheila, Kristen, and Mark.

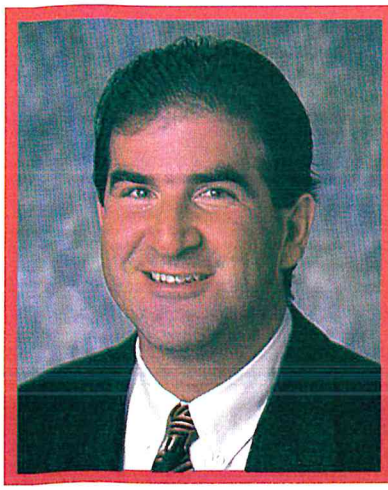

Bill Stoneman • Vice President & General Manager

Bill Stoneman enters his first season as vice president & general manager of the Angels. He becomes the ninth general manager in Angels history and is responsible for the overall baseball operations of the club, including player personnel, scouting and player development. Stoneman was appointed to his current position Nov. 1, 1999.

A native of Oak Park, Ill., Stoneman was raised in West Covina. He spent eight seasons in the major leagues, posting a 54-85 record while pitching for the Cubs, Expos (where he pitched two no-hitters) and Angels.

A graduate of the University of Idaho who also holds a master's degree in education from the University of Oklahoma, Stoneman and his wife, Diane, have have a daughter, Jill, and a son, Jeff.

Tim Mead • Vice President, Communications

Tim Mead begins his third season as vice president, communications after his appointment Feb. 9, 1998. He returned after serving as the Angels assistant general manager for four seasons. Mead had previously served as the club's v.p. of media relations from Dec. of '93 through Jan. of '94.

Mead began his career with the Angels as an intern in the public relations department in 1980. He was appointed director of media relations in 1985 before being promoted to assistant vice president of media relations in 1991. Mead was honored by the L.A./Anaheim chapter of the BBWAA with the "Good Guy" Award in 1985 and '91.

A native of Athens, Greece, Mead is a 1980 graduate of Cal Poly Pomona. He and his wife, Carole, have one son, Brandon.

Andy Roundtree • V.P., Finance & Administration

Andy Roundtree begins his seventh year as vice president of finance and administration for Anaheim Sports, Inc. As an original member of the Anaheim Sports, Inc. front office, the 46-year-old Southern California native is responsible for the overall financial operation of both the Angels and the NHL's Mighty Ducks of Anaheim, including budgeting, accounting, planning and payroll. Roundtree is also responsible for the office administration of the organization which includes human resources, insurance and ticketing.

A 1976 graduate of Claremont Men's College, Roundtree previously spent three years in France as controller of Euro-Disney. Roundtree and his wife, Patti, have three sons, Adam, Scott and Kevin.

Angels Manager & Coaches

Mike Scioscia • Manager

Forty-one-year-old Mike Scioscia begins his first season as manager of the Angels after spending last season at the helm of triple-A Albuquerque of the Pacific Coast League.

Sciocia had previously served as a bench coach for the Dodgers in '97 and '98 and as the organization's minor league catching coordinator in 1995-96. As a player, Scioscia spent 15 years with the Dodgers, where he caught a club record 1,395 games. He finishes his career by playing one year in San Diego and another in Texas.

Scioscia resides in Westlake Village with his wife, Anne, and their two kids, Matthew and Taylor.

Bud Black • Pitching Coach

Bud Black begins his first season as the Angels pitching coach after spending last season as a special assistant the general manager of the Cleveland Indians. He served as pitching coach for the Indians triple-A affiliate in Buffalo in 1998.

A graduate of San Diego State with a degree in finance, Black pitched in the major leagues for 15 seasons, posting a 121-116 record with 32 complete games.

Black and his wife, Nanette, have two children, Jamie and Jessie.

Alfredo Griffin • First Base Coach

Longtime big league infielder Alfredo Griffin begins his first season as the Angels first base coach. Griffin spent 1996-97 as the Blue Jays first base coach and was also a roving instructor for Toronto.

As a player, Griffin spent 18 seasons in the big leagues, playing for Cleveland, Toronto, Oakland and Los Angeles. Griffin played on three Worls Series championship teams (L.A. in '88; Tor. in '92-93) and was a Gold Glove shortstop in '85.

Griffin and his wife, Noris, have two children, Rosemary and Aneris.

Mickey Hatcher • Hitting Coach

Mickey Hatcher joins the Angels as hitting coach after serving under Mike Scioscia in the same capacity last season at Albuquerque. Hatcher has also managed at single-A San Bernardino and rookie-level Great Falls. He was the Texas Rangers first base coach in '93-94.

Before his coaching career, Hatcher spent 12 seasons in the big leagues as a player with the Dodgers and Twins. He hit .368 with two home runs to help lead the Dodgers to a 1988 World Series upset of the Oakland A's.

Mickey has two children, Brynn and Amy.

Joe Maddon • Bench Coach

Popular Joe Maddon begins his seventh season on the Angels big league staff and his 26th year in the organization. He has served as the team's first base coach and bullpen coach. Maddon has had three stints as interim manager for the Angels, compiling a 33-26 record.

A Hazelton, Penn., native, Maddon and his wife, Bette, reside in Mesa, Ariz., with their two children, Sara and Joey.

Bobby Ramos • Bullpen Coach

After three seasons as a minor league manager for the Tampa Bay Devil Rays, Bobby Ramos joins the Angels as bullpen coach. Before joining the Devil Rays organization, Ramos spent three seasons managing Houston's Gulf Coast league team to a 104-72 record. As a player, Ramos spent parts of five seasons in the major leagues with Expos, primarily as a backup catcher.

Ramos and his wife, Maria, have three children, Elayne, Jason and Emily, and reside in Miami, Fla.

Ron Roenicke • Third Base Coach

After managing the San Francisco Giants triple-A affiliate at Fresno to a 73-69 record last season, Ron Roenicke begins his first season as an Angels coach. Roenicke had spent the previous seven seasons as a coach in the Los Angeles Dodgers organization. In '97, he was named Texas League Manager of the Year when he led San Antonio to an 84-55 record and the league championship. Roenicke played eight seasons in the major leagues, appearing for the Dodgers, Seattle, San Diego, San Francisco, Philadelphia and Cincinnati.

Orlando Mercado • Bullpen Catcher

Orlando Mercado begins his seventh season in the Angels organization and his first as the club's bullpen catcher. Mercado spent the last five seasons as the Angels minor league coach. In 1995, he served as a player-coach at triple-A Vancouver. As a catcher, Mercado played professionally for 17 seasons with 12 different organizations, and appeared in the big leagues with eight different franchises. Orlando and his wife, Maribel have three children Sheika, Orlando and Nicole and reside in Arecibo, P.R.

JOHN CORDES/LOA

Out of the Blue

In former Dodger catcher Mike Scioscia, the Angels are convinced they have found the right man to lead the club into a new era

By Kurt Loe

Getting your first crack at managing in the big leagues is never easy. General managers usually sift their way through several candidates before choosing the right man for the job. Anaheim Angel General Manager Bill Stoneman went through a similar process before deciding that Mike Scioscia was the man he wanted at the helm.

Scioscia's climb to the top of Stoneman's list was quick and when it came down to the decision, it was pretty clear as tho who was the right man for the job.

"He was on the list (of candidates) because I knew he had already performed as a manager at triple-A and prior to that as a coach in the major leagues. So it looked like he was a candidate who was ready to make the step into being a manager in the major leagues," Stoneman said. "He had done all the work to prepare himself for it. That got him on the list and the fact he had been a very competitive and intelligent player helped, too."

First impressions can often leave a lasting impact and that's what really helped Scioscia. "I didn't know him before the first interview," Stoneman said. "But, it became pretty evident that he was very well-rounded. He commands a presence that I think it going to be very helpful in terms of him managing this club and gaining the confidence of the players. But, he also really understands the game."

There was not one overriding factor in Stoneman's decision. "No, it was the whole package that struck me," he said. "I didn't spot a weakness and I spotted a lot of strengths. It wasn't just one of them. When you looked at him with all the candidates for the job, he appeared to be the best rounded of them."

How easy was the decision? "He had a lot of competition," Stoneman said. "I probably could have made other good choices. But, I had to make the best choice. After I went through all of them, I pretty well knew who the guy was that I wanted to investigate and I did have a second interview with him just to confirm my feeling from the first interview."

With that out of the way, Anaheim had its manager for the beginning of the new millennium.

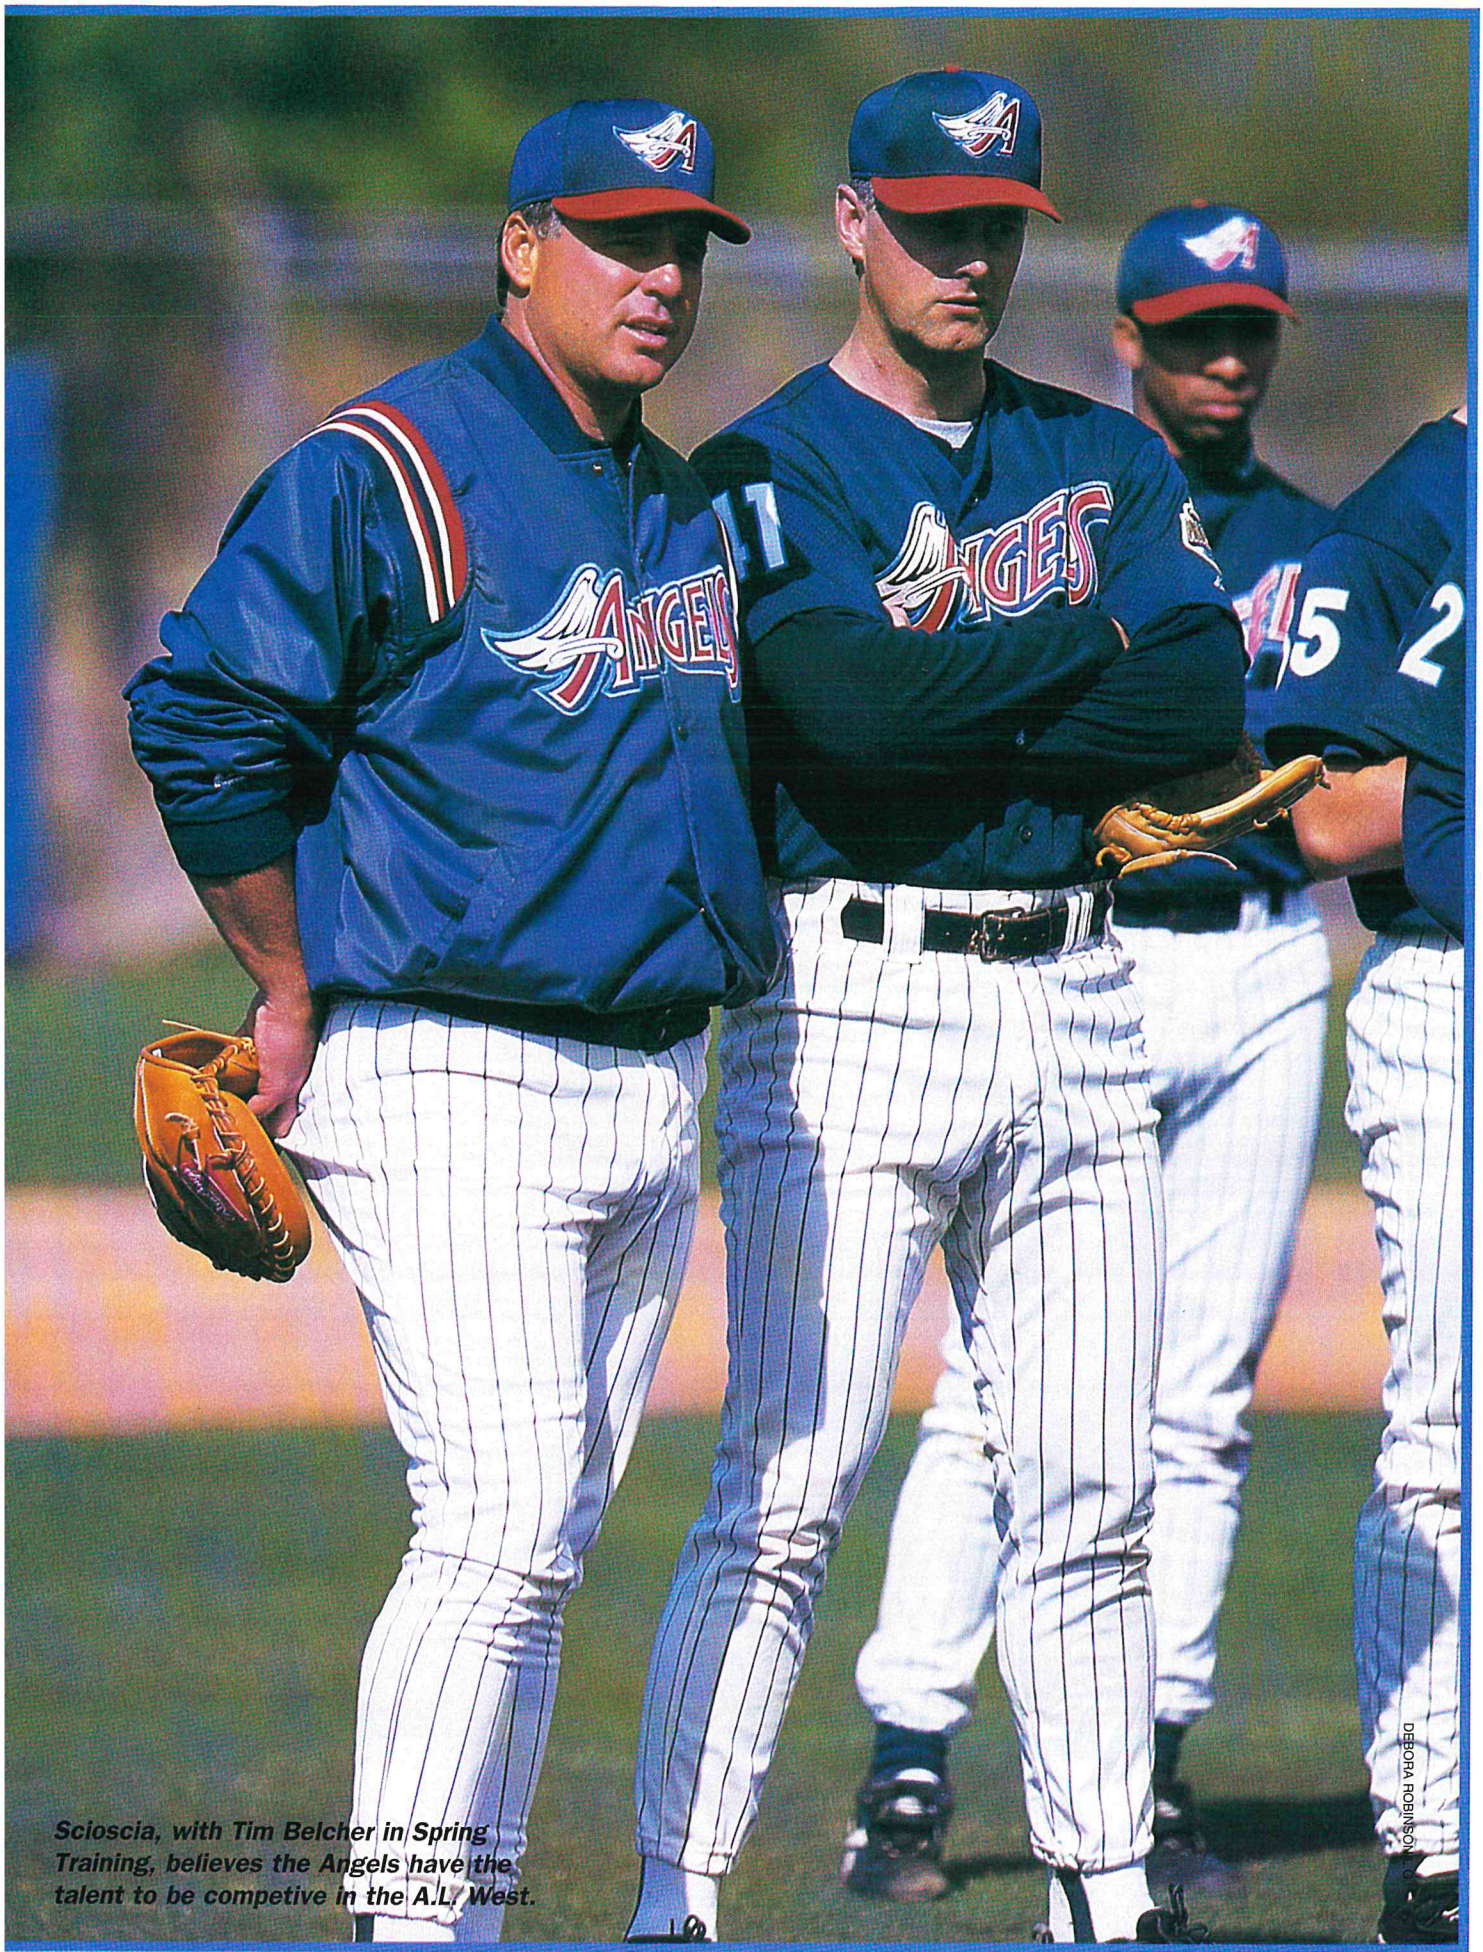

Getting that first managerial job is always special for everybody and Scioscia is no different. "I am very excited," Scioscia said. "We have done a lot of preparing this winter and hopefully we have done our homework and are ready to go."

In major league baseball, one never knows if or when he is going to get the chance to manage and Scioscia realizes how lucky he is. "I had hoped to get an opportunity sometime," he said. "As a prospective manager, you never really know where your opportunity is going to come. I was very fortunate to have it happen quickly and in Southern California, where I make my home. So, I am extremely excited and I understand the challenge. But, I am excited to work hard and do a good job."

A quality big league manager must have a strong grasp of all aspects of the game from pitching to offense. Scioscia has that, especially the pitching part, having spent his big league playing career behind the plate. However, he brings some other ingredients that are just as important.

"What I bring is an open mind and communication which I think the players will respond to," Scioscia said. "I think I understand where they are coming from. I understand the pressures of this game and the need to be able to communicate with your manager. Hopefully, I will create an atmosphere where guys will be motivated to come to the park and work and play hard which will lead to us becoming a better club. That's my job, along with our coaches. I don't think anyone can do it by themselves. It is definitely a team effort, not only from the players' side, but the management side. We will all have to be on the same page and that's my responsibility to make sure we are on the same page and we do create the environment to where these players can excel.

Scioscia's attitude and approach had an immediate impact on the team, especially a couple of his veterans.

"I think it's great," Angel catcher Matt Walbeck said. "I never had the good fortune of having a manager who was a big league catcher. To have a manager who played as long as he did makes it much better, much easier to communicate. He has been there. There is no second-guessing what he says. We work hard and we sleep hard at night."

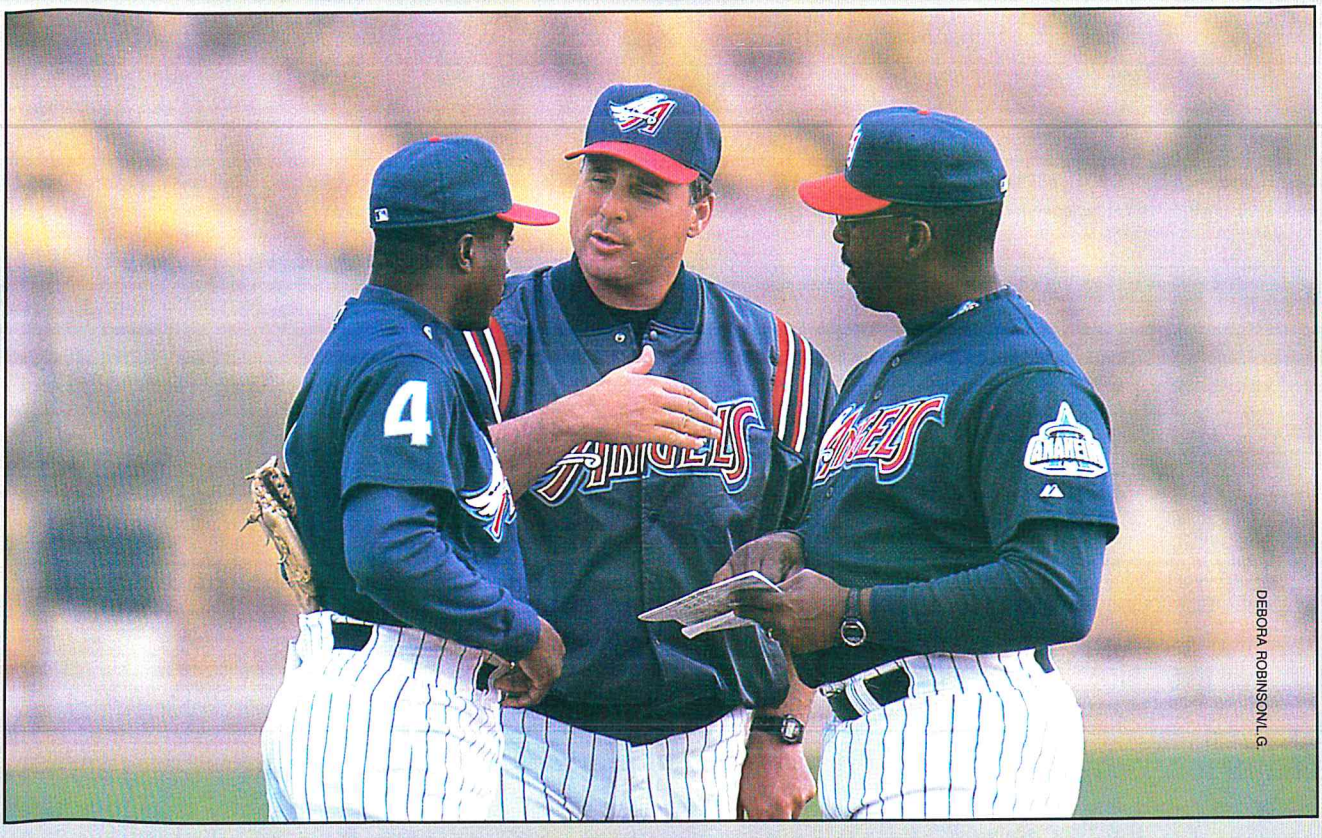

The hard work Walbeck was referring to was the seemingly endless catching drills during spring training. The catchers were usually one of the last groups calling it a day and Scioscia was right there with them helping them with the finer points of catching. In fact, he even participated in some of the drills. One day he slid into home plate as the catchers were working on blocking the plate, which used to be a Scioscia trademark from his playing days. It has been a while since he was that active in a workout. "The last time I did it was sliding into (Mike) Piazza and I tore cartilage in my knee," Scioscia said.

First baseman Mo Vaughn greeted his new manager with a big hug on the opening day of camp and spoke highly of him following the first exhibition game. "Defensively, Mike's attitude has already rubbed off in our approach to and how we go about our business."

Part of Scioscia's master plan will be to get his players to relax a little bit while still playing hard. "There is an absolute difference," he said. "Being relaxed does not mean that you are not focused or that you don't come to the park and play with intensity. I think playing relaxed is being focused, being in the game, but also having the confidence to

"I don't think I am overly demanding, but the simple rules of my program are very important. I expect the guys to put that effort into practice, mentally preparing themselves to play a game every night and to playing hard from the first out to the last."

threw him out at first. "It was a do-or-die play," Remy said. "I didn't have time to think. Sometimes it seems like the other team doesn't want to hit against him. I know I wouldn't." Ryan said that was the only play that concerned him but believed the fact that Davis was slow afoot helped.

Remy admitted to being more than a bit nervous. "By the seventh inning," he said, "I was shaking more than he was." Catcher Ellie Rodriguez called the game the highlight of his career and said by the seventh inning there was silence on the bench. "Everyone was thinking no-hitter," Rodriguez said.

For Ryan, it was his second no-hitter in Anaheim, but the first one his wife Ruth witnessed. "I wanted to do this at home," he said. "That's what this is all about — fan appreciation." Ryan's previous no-hitters were a 4-0 win over the Twins at the Big A on Sept. 28, 1974; a 3-0 win over the Royals at Kansas City on May 15, 1973 and 6-0 victory over Detroit on July 15, 1972.

With Ryan spending his prime years in an Angels uniform, every outing had potential no-hitter written all over it, something Ryan tried to dismiss when he took the mound. "A no-hitter isn't on my mind as much as it is with some of the fellows on this club," Ryan said. "Really, I don't think about it. You do that and you're only kidding yourself. I think I can win enough games without throwing no-hitters all the time."

know that you can achieve in any situation that you are called upon. That relaxation is bred through confidence and hopefully we can instill that in players because they are a very talented ball club."

Whether he can teach all of it, he isn't sure. But he believes that you need a certain type of environment to be successful. "I think you can create the atmosphere that will allow it to come to fruition," Scioscia said. "As coaches, we can definitely create an attitude and atmosphere to help keep the players relaxed and focused. It's an art form that you really have to work at and every successful manager is able to accomplish this. It's a challenge, but it's achievable."

Playing for him apparently isn't going to be very difficult either. "I have a very simple program that I was raised on when I was playing ball in the Dodger organization," Scioscia said. "That is, you get to the ballpark on time. You practice the game as you would play it, and you prepare yourself to play ballgames and you play them hard. I don't think I am overly demanding, but the simple rules of my program are very important. I expect the guys to put that effort into practice, mentally preparing themselves to play a game every night and to playing hard from the first out to the last. Those are very simple expectations that I think any player will react to in a positive way. Those guidelines are important to a championship caliber ballclub and that's what we are trying to infuse into this organization."

"I am very excited about the makeup of this ballclub," Scioscia said. "I think we have a sleeping lion offensively that is ready to awake. The offense is very potent and versatile."
• MIKE SCIOSCIA

Even with an off-season that saw the Angels relatively inactive in the trade market, Scioscia is enthusiastic about the potential of his team.

"I am very excited about the makeup of this ballclub," Scioscia said. "I think we have a sleeping lion offensively that is ready to awake. The offense is very potent and versatile. We have a lot of guys who can hit at the top or middle of the lineup. There is a pretty good balance right-handed to left-handed, tremendous power and there is an element of speed that we can build off in order to manufacture some runs. From top-to-bottom, there is really no breather in and we will be able to keep a lot of pressure on opposing teams.

"The biggest change in this ballclub is going to be the health of the players. We don't expect the players to have the same injuries that plagued them last year and that's going to be the biggest change in this team."

His lack of big league managerial experience may be a concern to some. However, it certainly isn't Scioscia. "Give me a chance to manage first, before you start talking about shortcomings," he said. "When you get this position you are always going to be prone to scrutiny. That is part of this position. I am not affected one way or another by peoples' scrutiny. The only way I know how to attack this job is to go out hard on all cylinders and have an understanding of what it takes to get a ballclub going and continuing in the right direction.

"I feel I am prepared and ready for the challenge. Experience manifests itself in different ways. I have been around some very influential people that have helped my makeup as far as where I am today. Guys like Roy Campanella, Del Crandall, John Roseboro, Walter Alston and Tom Lasorda affected my baseball career in a positive way. That experience coupled not only with my playing career, but my work in player development and managing throughout the minor leagues and winter ball has given my a great foundation to get this position."

Second Base
Bobby Grich

One of the most popular Angels ever, Bobby Grich spent 10 seasons in an Anaheim, hitting .269 with 154 home runs and 557 RBI. He and Brian Downing are the only Angels to play for all three divisional winners.

Shortstop • Jim Fregosi

The only man on the team to appear on the 40th Season team twice, Fregosi was a six-time all-star shortstop. Fregosi won the Owner's Trophy three times and won a Gold Glove in 1964.

We know how to hit a curve.

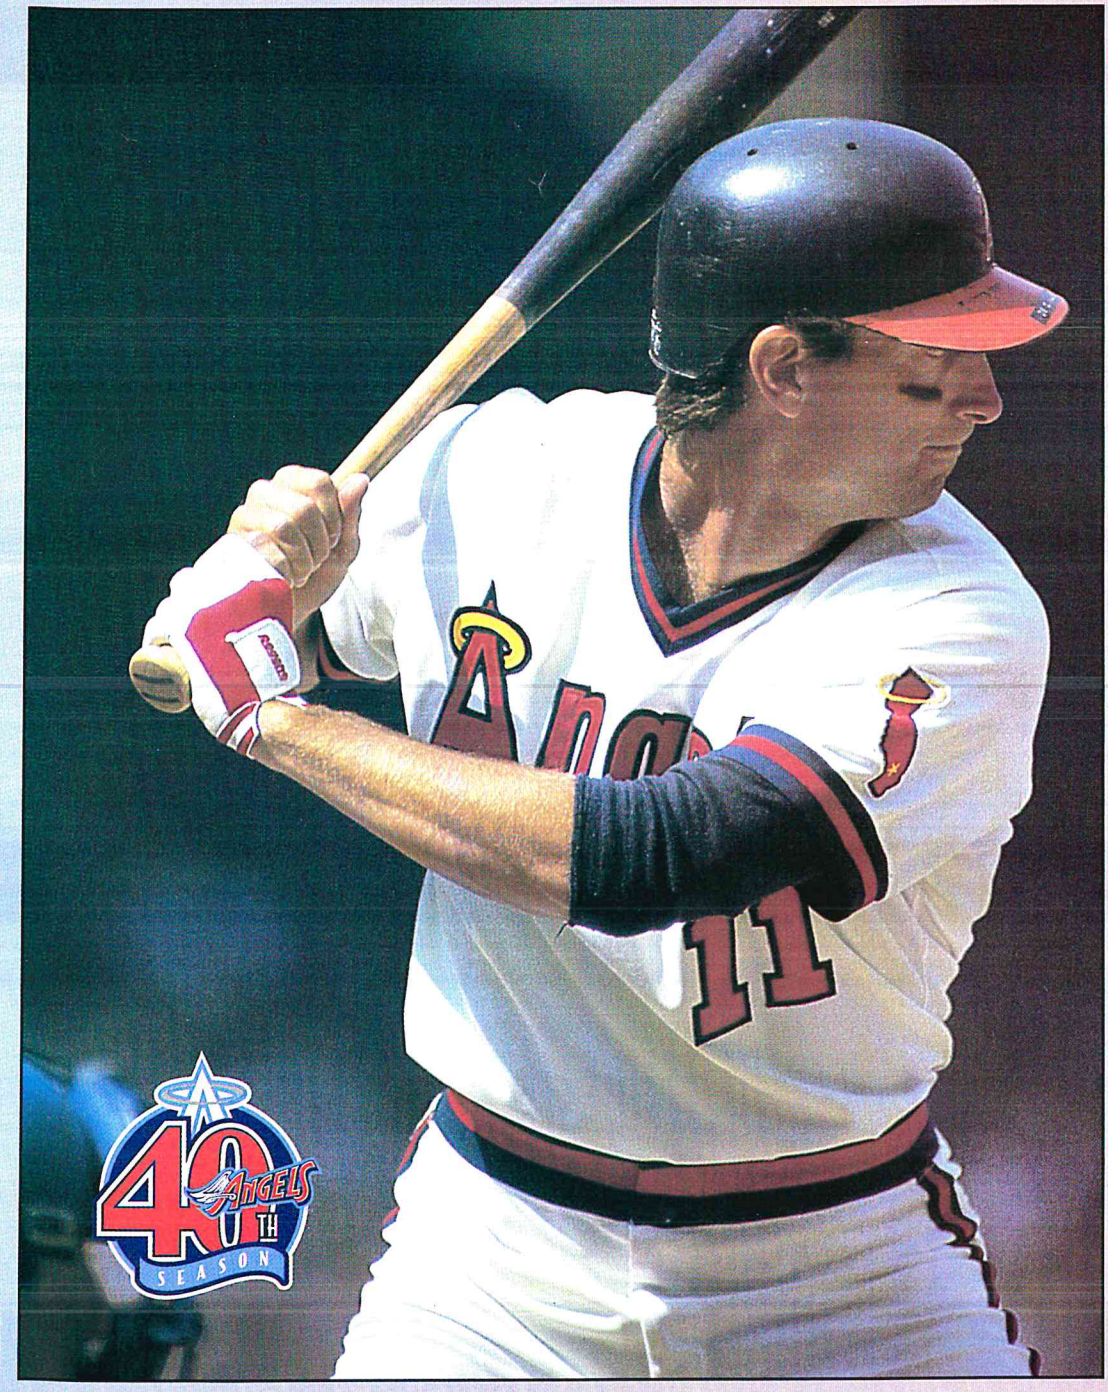

Dodge Different.

Third Base • Doug DeCinces

Doug DeCinces helped the Angels to post-season play twice during his six years with the club. DeCinces won the 1982 Owner's Trophy as the team's Most Valuable Player

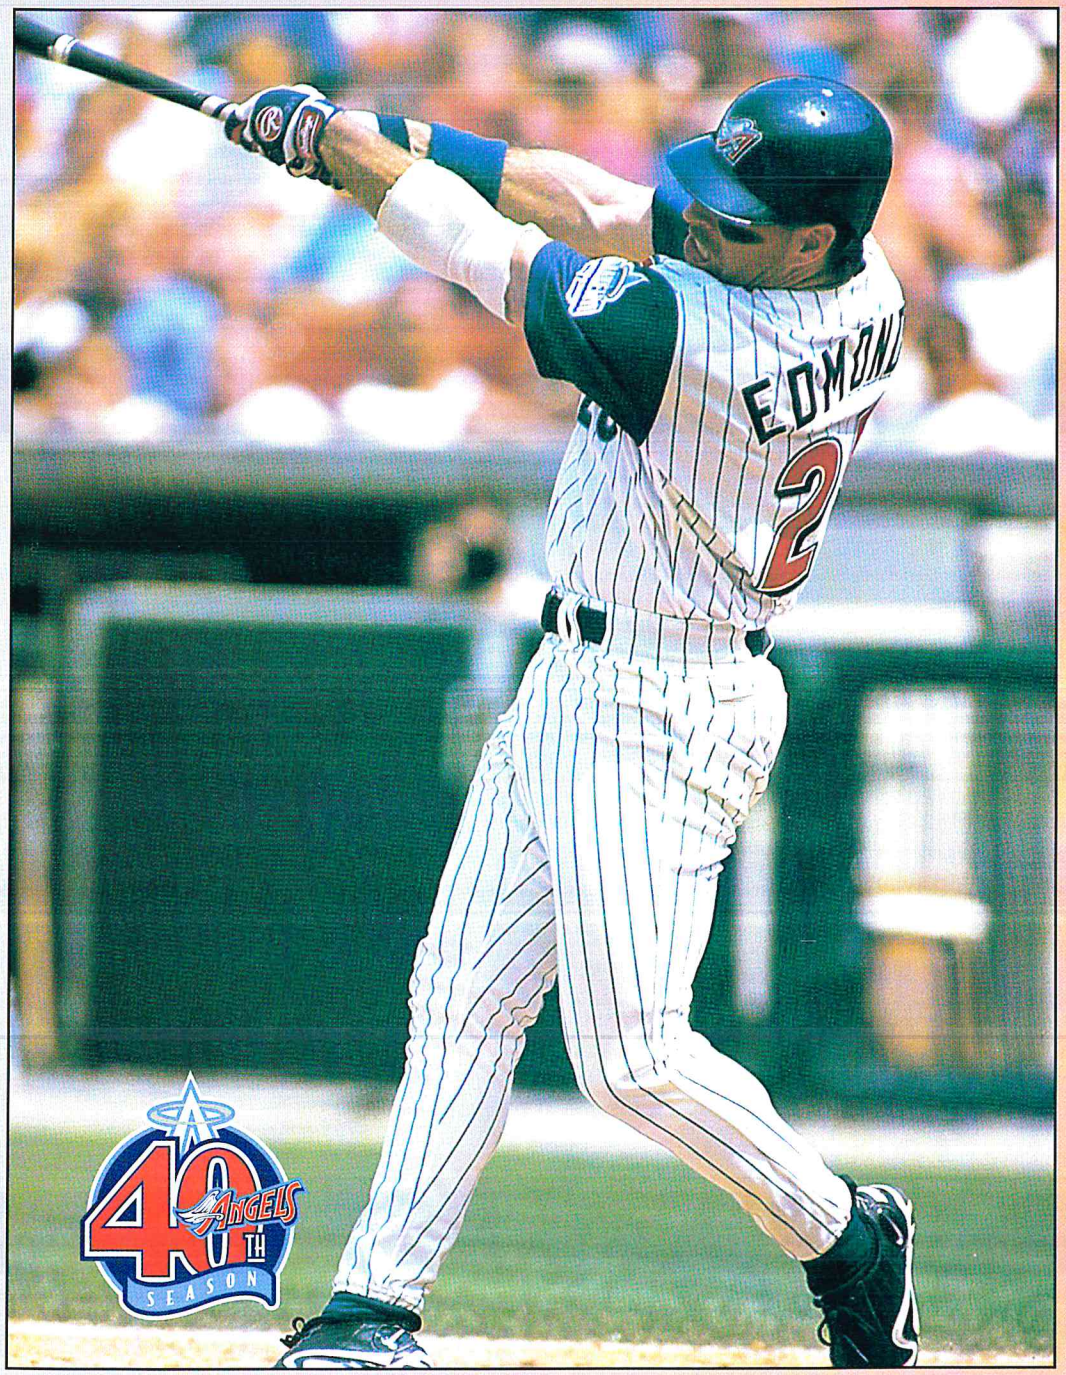

V.J. LOVERO

A local hero from Anaheim's Magnolia High School, Brian Downing spent 13 seasons in an Angels uniform, participating in all three of the club's postseason appearances.

DEBORA ROBINSON/L.G.

Centerfield • Jim Edmonds

On his way to two Gold Glove Awards, Jim Edmonds made the impossible seem routine. Though defense was his calling card, Edmonds made offense look easy, too, routinely hitting around .300.

Second Love

Baseball has always been Angel second baseman Scott Spiezio's first love but music comes next

• By Doug Ward •

Scott Spiezio is a second baseman first and a musician second. But the Angel infielder spends so much time talking about and playing his first love that when the subject of music comes up, Spiezio can hardly contain his enthusiasm.

"I love music," says Spiezio. "I get as many CD's as a I can get my hands on and try to listen to a lot of different types of music, even though hard rock is my favorite type of music. I'll listen to Frank Sinatra, everything. You name it, I'll listen to it."

Spiezio comes by his love of music quite naturally. His father was a musician, an accordion and piano player who played in a jazz band as a young man. Spiezio's mom played the violin.

A few years ago, Spiezio and a few of his high school friends from Morris, Ill., decided to put a band together.

"We formed a band about two-and-a-half years ago," Spiezio says. "We just went out and bought instruments. We didn't know anything about music. We just started a band."

The band, Sand Frog, plays in the basement of Spiezio's house in Chicago.

Music is strictly a hobby. "It's a great hobby but it's just a hobby," Spiezio says. "We really don't think it's going to mushroom into anything else but we have a great time doing it in the off-season."

Spiezio's true love in baseball. "I've always loved baseball and I never really thought about trying to play an instrument or trying to sing or write songs. My buddy went out and bought a guitar and wrote some songs so I thought maybe I could do it, too."

Little by little, it grew into a band. "I've got a little studio in my basement and we've got a stage down there. We had a show at the Cubby Bear in Chicago last year where we invited about a 150 people and had a Halloween bash."

Although music is strictly for fun, Spiezio has already gotten more exposure than most garage bands. He was a part of a Major League Baseball CD that included former Angel Jack McDowell and the Yankees' Bernie Williams, both respected musicians.

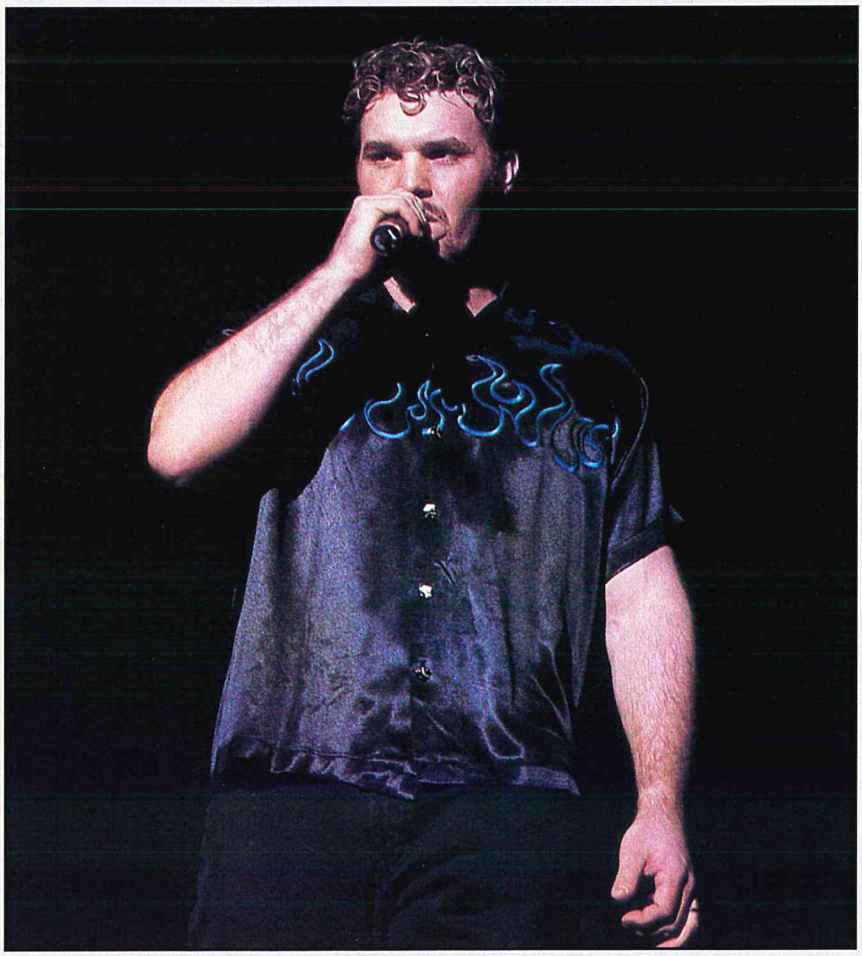

"It was a lot of fun," Spiezio says. "Being a baseball player gave me a chance to be on a real record. If I wasn't a baseball player, I don't think anybody would approach me to put my music out there. To be on there with Jack McDowell and Bernie Williams, who are established musicians, that was pretty cool."

Spiezio is hesitant to tell you that he was influenced by Alice in Chains and Metallica. "If I mention their names," he laughs, "they'd probably get mad."

Spiezio became the group's lead singer by default. "My brother-in-law bought a guitar and then I bought a guitar but nobody would sing," Scott says, "so I started mouthing the lyrics, then signing, and it just kind of stuck. I was the only one who would do it."

Spiezio also sang at the "Juden and Friends" concert put on by former Angel pitcher Jeff Juden and backed by professional musicians.

During the baseball season, however, music takes a back seat. It turns out the backup singer is a first string second baseman.

Throwing Heat

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

An a warm Sunday afternoon in 1975, Nolan Ryan threw his fourth career no-hitter

Angels Flashback

By the start of the 1975 season it was becoming increasingly clear that Nolan Ryan was one of baseball's most dominant pitchers. If there were any doubters left, Ryan won them over on June 1 of that season by pitching the fourth no-hitter of his career, a 1-0 shutout of the Orioles on a Sunday afternoon at Anaheim Stadium. At the age of 28, Ryan had tied Sandy Koufax's record for most no-hitters in a career.

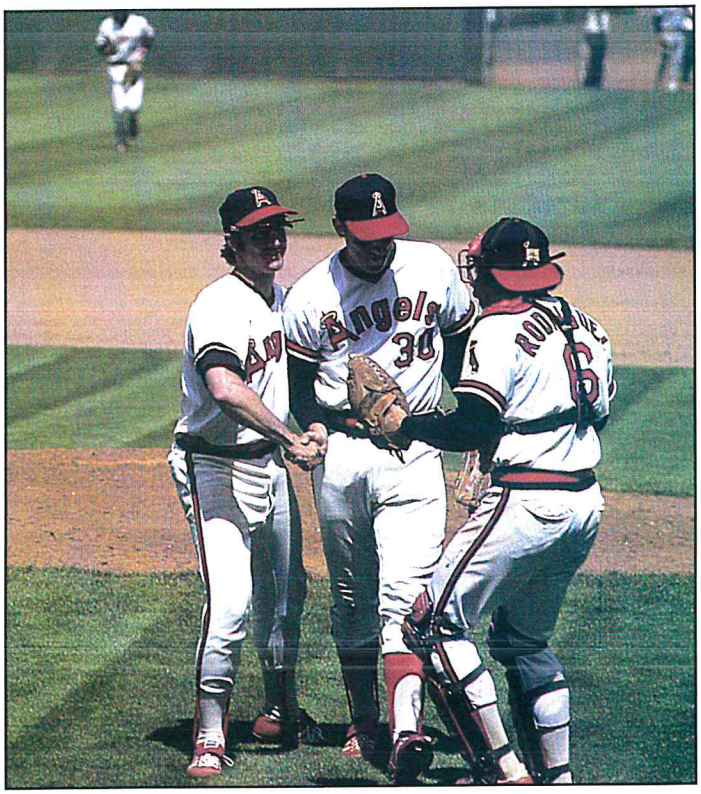

"I thought somewhere along the line I might have a chance to tie Koufax," Ryan said after the game. "I don't feel like I've reached my peak but I do feel like I'm getting there this year."

Koufax said "there was no doubt he was going to do it. The only question is how many more he's going to pitch." The answer, of course, was seven with Ryan pitching another one in Houston and two more for the Texas Rangers.

Against the Orioles that June day, Ryan struck out nine and walked four to improve his record to 9-3 with an ERA of 2.44. His 96 strikeouts led the majors.

"By the sixth inning, I knew I had a no-hitter going," Ryan said. "But I never did get the feeling I'd throw one. All I really wanted to do was be a stopper. I had the opportunity to stop our losing streak and pick our club up. That's all I really wanted to do. When it was all over, all I could feel was relief."

The last out was a strikeout of Baltimore second baseman Bobby Grich, a future teammate of Ryan's with the Angels. With two strikes, Ryan threw a change up and Grich never got the bat off his shoulders. "We fooled him," Ryan said. "I felt like Grich was probably looking for a fastball. He was battling me all day."

Said Grich: "I was just looking for the ball. He fooled me and put it in the perfect spot, on the outside corner. You've got to be looking for Ryan's fastball and if he throws a curve or a changeup, you just have to adjust. Really, the scoreboard tells the whole story. He's tough."

The only truly difficult play of the day came when Angels second baseman Jerry Remy went behind second base to snare a high hopper off the bat of Tommy Davis, then threw him out at first. "It was a do-or-die play," Remy said. "I didn't have time to think. Sometimes it seems like the other team doesn't want to hit against him. I know I wouldn't." Ryan said that was the only play that concerned him but believed the fact that Davis was slow afoot helped.

Remy admitted to being more than a bit nervous. "By the seventh inning," he said, "I was shaking more than he was." Catcher Ellie Rodriguez called the game the highlight of his career and said by the seventh inning there was silence on the bench. "Everyone was thinking no-hitter," Rodriguez said.

For Ryan, it was his second no-hitter in Anaheim, but the first one his wife Ruth witnessed. "I wanted to do this at home," he said. "That's what this is all about — fan appreciation." Ryan's previous no-hitters were a 4-0 win over the Twins at the Big A on Sept. 28, 1974; a 3-0 win over the Royals at Kansas City on May 15, 1973 and 6-0 victory over Detroit on July 15, 1972.

With Ryan spending his prime years in an Angels uniform, every outing had potential no-hitter written all over it, something Ryan tried to dismiss when he took the mound. "A no-hitter isn't on my mind as much as it is with some of the fellows on this club," Ryan said. "Really, I don't think about it. You do that and you're only kidding yourself. I think I can win enough games without throwing no-hitters all the time."

Community Relations

Home Team

How the Angels team up to help their community

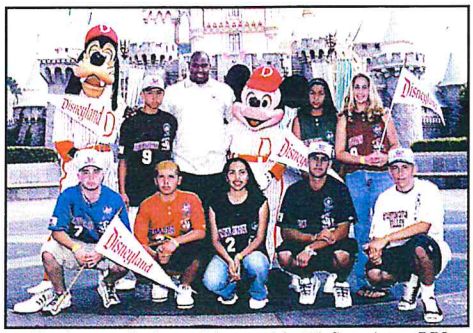

The 2000 season marks the 40th season in Angels history. In addition to the many great moments the Angels have enjoyed on the field, the team has also committed themselves to becoming an integral part of the Southern California community. This dedication is embodied in the many charitable programs, fundraisers and community activities that the Angels sponsor or support. Each Spring, the Angels take part in the annual Gene Autry Courage Awards dinner. This year the event will take place on March 20 in Tempe, Ariz. The award is given annually to individuals in sports whose life and actions demonstrate special courage in the face of challenge. The event also raises money for Angels Care to benefit worthy charitable groups in the Phoenix area. When the Angels returned to Anaheim, the team was welcomed home by the Anaheim Chamber of Commerce where they joined forces for an annual luncheon to kickoff the baseball season. The luncheon, held March 31 at the Anaheim Marriott, introduces and showcases the Angels team to their fans.

Anaheim boys celebrate after winning Junior Boys Division.

The Angels organization has also made it a priority to become actively involved in raising funds for local charitable organizations. Through Angels Care, a fund of the Robert R. McCormick Tribune Foundation, the Angels help raise hundreds of thousands of dollars each season that benefit local charities. Recent Angels Care grant recipients include the Bridges Project of the Orange County Human Relations Department, Family Solutions, Friends of Long Beach Parks & Recreation, Girls, Inc. of Orange County, Stop-Gap and CaliforniaKids.

These groups combined to receive over $200,000 to fund their worthy programs. Angels Care also enabled the Angels to fund youth baseball programs like Gene Autry RBI League and and the Angels Rookie Ball programs which provide a place for thousands of underserved children to become involved in the game of baseball. The Gene Autry Reviving Baseball in Inner Cities (RBI) League begins it's second full season in 2000, expanding from 29 teams in 1999 to 49 teams serving over 600 children this season. The league is a youth baseball and softball program offered free of charge to Orange County Boys & Girls Club members 12-18 years of age. The league not only provides an opportunity for children to play baseball but also assists them with schoolwork and making good life decisions. Angels first baseman Mo Vaughn is an active supporter of RBI League through monetary donations and by hosting a special day for children in the league at Disneyland.

Mo Vaughn spends day at Disney with 400 Gene Autry RBI League Kids.

At Tustin Ranch Golf Club it is our pleasure to treat you like royalty. Each time you visit we roll out the red carpet…6,700 yards of rolling fairways, tiered greens, and intriguing water elements. It's all part of the "Best Maintained Course in Orange County."

Enjoy private banquets fit for a king, corporate events planned to a tee, and challenging tournaments surrounded by breathtaking scenery. Plus, you'll find everything you need to enjoy your game, from personal caddies to a lighted driving range and a top-rated golf school.

Experience the red carpet treatment at one of Orange County's finest golf clubs.

Edison International welcomes the Angels℠ for another exciting season. The energy is back. The roar of the crowd. The first pitch. The crack of the bat. To make the game even more enjoyable, Edison International is again pleased to offer "Hometown Thursdays." Simply bring your Southern California Edison electric bill to any Thursday Angels game and buy two tickets for the price of one.* Together with the Angels, we plan to make this a winning season for all of Southern California. www.edison.com

EDISON INTERNATIONAL℠

*Certain restrictions and limitations apply. Limit of six tickets total per transaction, while supplies last.
